OBITUARY RECORD

GRADUATES OF YALE COLLEGE

Deceased during the academical year ending July, 1872, including the record of a few who died previously, hitherto unreported.

[Presented at the Meeting of the Alumni, July 10, 1872]

[No 2 of the Second Printed Series, and No 31 of the whole Record]

GEORGE PLUMMER, a native of Glastenbury, Conn., the son of Isaac and Abigail E (Mills) Plummer, was born 7 Dec., 1785.

He studied law with his uncle, Judge Mills, of New Haven, until his admission to the bar in March, 1807. He then settled in Glastenbury, and continued in the practice of law, until the death of his father, in April, 1812, obliged him to choose between the abandonment of the farm which he inherited and his profession. He decided on the life of a farmer, and never returned to the law. During the summer of 1814 he was in active service in the war with Great Britain. In 1844 and 1851 Mr. Plummer represented the 2d District in the State Senate, and during both years was ex officio a member of the Corporation of Yale College. He was chosen a Deacon of the Congregational Church in Glastenbury, in 1827, and held that office until his death, which occurred on the 2d of June, 1872.

He married, 7 May, 1807, Anne, eldest daughter of Rev. William Lockwood (Y. C. 1774) of Glastenbury. She died 25 Dec., 1859. Of their three children, two daughters died in early married life, and one son (Y. C 1832) survives.

ARISTARCHUS CHAMPION, son of Gen. Henry Champion, and Abigail (Tinker) Champion, was born in Colchester, Conn., 23 Oct., 1784.
He at first studied law in New London, Conn., but soon became the manager of his father's interest in the "New Connecticut" lands and in lands in Western New York, and in 1826, took up his residence in Rochester, where he invested largely in real estate, while the place was as yet a mere village. There he spent the rest of his life, occupied with the care of his lands, and in labors of local and public benevolence. His systematic munificence toward religious and philanthropic objects has rarely been equaled in this country. He died at his residence, outside the city limits, in the township of Gates, 18 Sept., 1871, aged nearly 87. He was unmarried.

Silas Webster Robbins, son of Jacob and Eunice (Webster) Robbins, of Rocky Hill, in Wethersfield, Conn., was born 24 Aug., 1788.

Immediately after graduation, he entered the Law School at Litchfield, under Judge Reeve, and in 1811 emigrated to Kentucky and began the practice of his profession in Winchester. In the following year he was married, in Litchfield, to Caroline, youngest daughter of the late Uriah Tracy (Y. C. 1778), at the time of his death (in 1807) U. S. Senator from Conn.

Mr. Robbins soon became prominent in his profession, and was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court of his adopted State; as such he was conspicuous as an "Old Court Judge" in the severe political struggle in Kentucky, in which the judges so named were finally successful.

Having lost his wife in 1837, Judge Robbins removed in 1838 to Springfield, Ill., where he resumed the practice of law. In 1858 he retired from active life to his farm in the township of Springfield, about four miles from the city, where he died, 19 June, 1871, aged nearly 86.

He was married twice after the death of his first wife, and left a widow. His only surviving child is a daughter.

Samuel Finley Breese Morse, who died of paralysis of the brain at his residence in N. Y. city, Apr. 2, 1872, was the eldest son of Rev. Jedediah Morse, D.D. (Y. C. 1783) and Elizabeth Ann (Breese) Morse. He was born in Charlestown, Mass., Apr. 27, 1791.

Having developed a decided talent for painting, he went to England in 1811 with Washington Allston, to study under his tuition and that of Benjamin West. By Allston's advice he also devoted himself to sculpture, and in 1813 received the gold medal of the Adelphi Society of Arts for an original model of a Dying Hercules.

In 1815 Mr. Morse returned to America, settling at first in Boston. Thence he went to Concord, N. H., in 1818, and thence to Charleston, S. C., and about 1822 he opened a studio in N. Y. city. It was chiefly by his exertions that in 1826 the National Academy of Design, of which he was the first president, was established.

In 1829 he went to Europe to prosecute art studies, and during his absence he was elected Professor of the literature of the Arts of Design in the University of the city of N. Y. While returning, in the autumn of 1832, to fill this professorship, Mr. Morse, who had always been interested in scientific studies, learning of recent discoveries in the science of electro-magnetism, conceived the idea of conveying intelligence by electricity. Circumstances prevented the completion of the first telegraphic recording apparatus until 1835. In 1837 Professor Morse had constructed two instruments, and began to exhibit the operation of his system; and in 1838 he applied to Congress for aid in erecting an experimental line. Failing in this, he visited Europe in the hope of securing patents from the various governments, but was unsuccessful. In 1843, after great effort, he obtained a grant of $30,000 for the construction of a telegraph from Washington to Baltimore. This work was completed in 1844, and satisfactorily demonstrated its value. The history of the Morse system of telegraphs since that date is sufficiently well known.

In 1846 this College conferred the degree of LL.D. on Professor Morse; and he received, within a few years after, a most gratifying number of testimonials from foreign governments. Not the least pleasing, however, of the honors paid to him was the erection of his statue in bronze in the Central Park in N. Y. city, in June, 1871, from the free contributions of the telegraphic fraternity.

Professor Morse seems also entitled to the credit of having laid the first telegraph lines under water, in 1842, and of having suggested the ocean telegraph in 1843.

His first marriage was in Oct., 1818, to Miss Lucretia P., daughter of Charles Walker, of Concord, N. H., by whom he had one daughter. His wife died Feb. 7, 1825, aged 25. He married again, Aug. 9, 1848, Miss Sarah E. Griswold, of New Orleans.
Professor Morse was a liberal benefactor of this College, and especially to be mentioned are his recent gifts of $10,000 to the Theological building fund, and of a painting by Allston, purchased at a cost of $7,000.

Sidney Edwards Morse, the second son of Rev. Jedidiah Morse, D.D. (Y.C. 1783), and of Elizabeth Ann (Breese) Morse, was born on the battle-field of Bunker's Hill, in Charlestown, Mass., Feb. 7, 1794.

In 1805, when but eleven years old, he passed the examination for admission into Yale College, but did not actually enter until two years later, and graduated the youngest in his class.

He studied law in the Litchfield Law School, and from that occupation was invited to Boston, to become the first editor (in Jan., 1816) of the Boston Recorder, "the oldest religious newspaper in the world." His connection with the Recorder was a brief one, and he subsequently spent more than two years (1817-20) in the Andover Theological Seminary. In 1823, in connection with his younger brother, Richard C. Morse (Y.C. 1812) he established the New York Observer, of which he remained chief editor and proprietor until 1858, when he retired to devote himself to scientific pursuits. He had already, in 1817, in connection with his elder brother, Samuel F. B. Morse (Y.C. 1810), patented a newly invented flexible piston-pump; and in 1839 had invented a new mode of engraving which he styled cerography. After leaving the Observer, he was especially interested in perfecting a new bathometer, on which he had been engaged during the evening of his fatal illness. He died of paralysis, at his residence in N.Y. city, Dec. 23d, 1871, in his 78th year.

Mr. Morse was married, Apr. 1, 1841, to Catharine, eldest child of Rev. Gilbert R. Livingston, D.D., of Philadelphia, who survives him, with one son and one daughter.

William Whiting Boardman, the eldest child of Hon. Elijah Boardman (U.S. Senator from Ohio) and Mary Ann (Whiting) Boardman, was born in New Milford, Conn., where his parents then resided, 10 Oct., 1794, and died in New Haven, Conn., 27 Aug., 1871.

The youngest member of his class at graduation, he spent a year at Harvard College, as a resident graduate, and then read law in New Milford and at the Litchfield Law School. He settled as an attorney in New Haven, in 1819, and for the five following years was clerk of the State Senate. For the next five years he served as Judge of Probate for the District of New Haven. In 1830 he was sent to the State Senate, and was twice re-elected. In 1836 and for three succeeding years he was elected to the House of Representatives, serving for the latter half of the time as Speaker. In 1840 he was appointed to fill an unexpired term in the U. S. Congress, and in the next year was elected for the next session. He was also a member of the State Legislature in 1845, 1849 and 1851, and for the first of these terms the Speaker of the House. He was prominently engaged in many of the successful business corporations of the city, and had large influence in the councils of the Episcopal Church in this diocese. The degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on him by Trinity College in 1863.

Judge Boardman was married, 28 July, 1857, to Miss Lucy Hall, of Poland, O., who survives him without children.

Benjamin Day died in Springfield, Mass., 13 May, 1872, aged 81. He was the fourth son of Heman and Lois (Ely) Day, of West Springfield, where he was born, 9 Nov., 1790.

He studied law, but early abandoned the practice of it for business. He was for several years cashier of the Springfield Bank, and then a merchant in the same city. From 1824 to 1827 he was cashier of a bank in Geneva, N. Y., but returned to business in Springfield. He was afterwards superintendent of the factories at Chicopee Falls, Mass., and for a short time a broker in N. Y. city. He then retired from active business, and for the rest of his life resided in Springfield.

He married, 3 Dec., 1820, Frances, daughter of James Dwight, of Springfield, who survives him, with two of their four children.

Augustus Baldwin Longstreet, son of William Longstreet, was born in Augusta, Ga., Sept. 22, 1790, and died in Oxford, Mpi., Sept. 9, 1870.

He studied in the Litchfield (Conn.) Law School, and settled in his native State. In 1821, he represented Greene County in the State Legislature, and the following year was made Judge of the Superior Court of the State. Declining re-election after one term, he resumed practice, and became especially distinguished in criminal cases. During the Nullification excitement, he established the Augusta Sentinel. In 1838 he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and from 1839 to 1848 was President of Emory College, in Oxford, Ga. He was then for a short time President of Centenary College, Jackson, La., and from 1849 to 1856 President of the University of Mississippi. Still later he was President of South Carolina College. After the outbreak of the late civil war he lived in seclusion in Oxford, Miss.

He was a frequent contributor to Southern periodicals, and published many separate works. Among the best known is his humorous collection of "Georgia Scenes." He received the degree of LL.D. from this College in 1841.

He studied medicine in Charleston with Dr. P. G. Prioleau, and practiced there during the prevalence of the yellow-fever in 1817. He subsequently attended a course of lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, and received the degree of M.D. in 1819. He returned to Charleston, and opened an office in July of the same year. Through his instrumentality a Medical College was established in Charleston in 1824, and he was called to the chair of the Institutes and Practice of Medicine, which he filled until 1832. He then withdrew, but on the reorganization of the institution in 1833, as the Medical College of the State, resumed his position. From 1847 to 1850 he occupied the corresponding chair in the University of the city of N. Y., but his health obliged him to return to his former post in Charleston. In 1858 he was called to the chair of Practice of Medicine in Jefferson College, Philadelphia, where he continued till his death. He received the degree of LL.D. from the University of the City of N. Y. in 1853.

Dr. Dickson was the author of several successful professional works, the chief of which was his Elements of Medicine, published in 1855. He was also a ready writer on miscellaneous subjects. An oration delivered by him before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of this College in 1842, was published.

Charles James Hinsdale, son of Epaphras and Elizabeth (Bowen) Hinsdale, was born in New York city, 12 Feb., 1796. When four years old, his parents removed to Newark, N. J., from which place he entered college.
He pursued a theological course for over two years in Andover Seminary, and finished his studies at Princeton Seminary in 1819. In 1820 he went on a missionary tour to the South, remaining about two years. On his return he was invited to Meriden, Conn., where he was ordained pastor of the First Congregational Church, 15 June, 1828. This charge he retained until Dec., 1833. In 1835 he was called to the Congregational Church in Blandford, Hampden County, Mass., where he was installed, 20 Jan., 1836. He continued the settled pastor of that church until 1863, and performed occasional ministerial service until his death. His residence remained in Blandford, where he was instantly killed, by being thrown from his carriage, 17 Oct., 1871, in the 76th year of his age.

He married Mrs. Catharine Banks Chittenden, daughter of David D. Crane, Esq., of Newark, N. J., who died 26 Apr., 1865. They had seven children, of whom three died in infancy, and two sons and two daughters survive.

In Nov., 1866, he married Mrs. Mary A. Lloyd, of Blandford, who is still living.

JOHN METCALF GARFIELD, eldest son of Timothy and Eunice (Pond) Garfield, was born 21 July, 1790, in Grafton, Mass. After graduation he began the study of law with Seth P. Staples of New Haven. At the close of his second year, he became a teacher in the Lansingburgh (N. Y.) Academy, and after a year spent there, took charge of the Grammar School in Troy, N. Y.

In 1819 he established a Female Seminary in New Haven, which he conducted successfully until 1831, where he was appointed Principal of the Albany Female Seminary. During this time he pursued theological studies, and was ordained deacon in the Prot. Episc. Church by Bishop Brownell, in Hamden, Conn., 11 Aug., 1822, and was admitted to the priesthood, by the same prelate, in Meriden, 4 June, 1823. From this time he regularly officiated in neighboring towns until his removal from the State.

Mr. Garfield continued in his position in Albany until 1849, when he returned to New Haven. Here he resided until his death, and for the greater part of the time had charge of a church of colored people in the city.

He married, 22 Nov., 1816, Ann, eldest daughter of Nathaniel Lyon, of New Haven, and had two sons and six daughters. He died 10 March, 1872, and his wife two days later.
GEORGE HILL, the youngest son of Judge Henry and Leah Hill, was born in Guilford, Conn., 29 Jan., 1796.

After his graduation, he was employed in Washington, in the U. S. General Land Office, and in 1827 was appointed teacher of mathematics in the navy, in which capacity he was attached to the Mediterranean squadron till 1831. On his return he was made librarian of the State Department, with which office and other kindred duties he was occupied until 1839. He was then appointed consul in Turkey in Asia, but soon returned to Washington on account of ill health, and was employed in the State Department until his resignation in 1855. The remainder of his life was spent chiefly in his native town.

He died in St. Vincent Hospital, N. Y. city, 15 Dec. 1871.

Mr. Hill was married in 1817 to Miss Elizabeth S. Hamilton, of New Haven, Conn., and in 1833 to Miss Mary K. Greer, of Washington. By the latter, who died in 1836, he had a son and a daughter, both of whom died before him.

Mr. Hill published in 1839 a volume of poems, an earlier edition of which had appeared anonymously in 1831.

GEORGE CALVIN GODDARD, son of Hon. Calvin Goddard (Dartmouth Coll, 1786), was born in Norwich, Conn., in November, 1799. His mother, Alice Cogswell Hart, was the daughter of Rev. Levi Hart, D D. (Y. C. 1760), of Preston, Conn.

Immediately upon graduation he entered on the study of the law with Hon. James Broome, of Philadelphia, and continued in that city for some years. In 1828 he removed to N. Y. city, and formed a partnership with his father-in-law; he remained in the practice of his profession in N Y until compelled by ill health to retire in 1867. He then removed his residence to Norwich, Conn., where he died on the morning of July 4th, 1871.

Mr. Goddard married, in 1825, Catharine Susan, eldest daughter of Seth P Staples (Y. C 1797). She survives him, with one son (a surgeon in the U S. army) and one daughter, the only children living of a large family.

PELEG PHEIPS SANFORD, son of Peleg and Esther (Phelps) Sanford, was born in New Haven, Conn., 15 Nov., 1801.

After graduation he was engaged in mercantile business in New Haven until 1827. He then removed to Painesville, O., where he became a manufacturer of iron and stoves, from which business he retired in 1866. In Oct., 1870, he was rendered helpless by a fall, and continued so until his death at his residence in Painesville, 13 Nov., 1871.

He was twice married: first, to Elizabeth Mary Phelps, of New Haven, Conn., and again in 1829, to Elizabeth Ann Phelps, of Painesville, who died two years before him. He had six children, of whom two sons and one daughter survive him, one son being a graduate of this College of the Class of 1850.

WILLIAM WATSON TUDOR died in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 25, 1872, in his 72d year. He was the elder son of Samuel and Mary (Watson) Tudor, and was born in Hartford, Conn. He married Mary, daughter of Dr. Barwick Bruce, of Hartford, who survives him with children. His residence was in Brooklyn.

HENRY DAGGERT BULKLEY, son of John and Amelia Bulkley, was born in New Haven, Conn., Apr. 20, 1803. His mother was a daughter of Judge Henry Daggett, of New Haven.

He was engaged in mercantile pursuits in N. Y. city for six or seven years after graduation, and then returned here to study medicine under Dr. Knight. He received the degree of M.D. in 1830, and soon after went to Europe for further advantages, and spent some time in the hospitals of Paris studying cutaneous diseases.

He began practice in N. Y. city in Nov., 1832, and remained in extensive practice until his decease. He was especially an authority in cutaneous medicine, and one of the first in the country to lecture on these disorders, and the first to establish a dispensary in N. Y. city for their treatment. Besides his connection with several other dispensaries, he was appointed in 1848 attending physician to the N. Y. Hospital, which position he held until his death. He occupied at different times the presidential chairs of the N. Y. Academy of Medicine, the N. Y. County Medical Society, &c. In 1846 and in 1852, he published editions of Cazenave and Schédel on Diseases of the Skin, and in 1851 edited Gregory on Eruptive Fevers.

Dr. Bulkley visited Europe for his health in June, 1871, returning much benefited in October. He died of pneumonia at his residence in N. Y. city, Jan. 4, 1872, after an illness of four days.

In 1835 he married Juliana, daughter of Wheeler Barnes, Esq., of Rome, N. Y. He had four daughters and two sons; his widow survives him, with two daughters, and both sons, one of whom graduated here in 1866 and follows the profession of his father.
JOHN FLAVEL GRISWOLD, son of Theophilus Griswold, of Greenfield, Mass., was born 14 Apr., 1795.

He took a three years' course at Andover Theol. Seminary, graduating in 1824, and was ordained 8 Nov., 1825, at Shelburne, Mass., as an Evangelist. He passed the next three years in home-mission work in New Hampshire, and was installed pastor of the Second Congregational Church in South Hadley, Mass., 3 Dec., 1828. This charge he relinquished in 1832. On 10 Apr., 1834, he was installed over the Congregational Church in Newfane, Vt. (Fayetteville parish), where he remained until 31 July, 1839. He was pastor of the Church in Hartland, Vt., from 15 Sept., 1839, to 13 Feb., 1844, and stated supply of the Church in Washington, N. H., from 1 July, 1844, until the spring of 1866. His home was afterward in Brooklyn, N. Y., and during the summer months at Bernardston, Mass. He died in Brooklyn, 15 Feb., 1872, in his 77th year.

Mr Griswold was first married in 1830 to Catharine Gillet, of South Hadley, who died in 1832. He was subsequently twice married.

ROBERT WILLIAM HAXALL died in Richmond, Va., during the last week of the month of March, 1872, aged about 69.

He graduated from the Medical School of the University of Maryland in 1826, and was a practising physician in Richmond.

ELIPHALET ADAMS BULKELEY, son of John C. and Sarah (Taintor) Bulkeley, was born in Colchester, Conn., in June, 1804.

He studied law with Wm J Williams, of Lebanon, and began to practice his profession in East Haddam, Conn. After serving as Judge of Probate Court, County Judge, and member of the Legislature, he removed in 1847 to Hartford, where he resided till his death, from paralysis, 13 Feb., 1872. While in Hartford he was Judge of the City Court and State Senator. He was also prominently connected with the insurance business of Hartford. He was the first president of the Conn. Mutual Company, which he assisted in organizing; and subsequently in 1850 organized the Ætna Life Company, and held its presidency till his death. He was also the first president of the Ætna Bank.

He married, Jan. 31, 1830, Lydia S., daughter of Col. Avery Morgan, of Colchester, who survives him, with three of their six children. One son, who graduated at this College in 1856, died in the late war.
Frederick Baldwin Leonard, second son of Timothy and Mary (Baldwin) Leonard, was born in Sharon, Conn., 13 July, 1804. His parents removed to Lansingburgh, N. Y., in 1807.

He returned to New Haven in 1826 to study medicine, and received the degree of M.D. in 1828. He then established himself in Troy, N. Y., but his widowed mother needing his care, he soon removed to Lansingburgh, and for a time relinquished his profession. In 1834 he attended another course of medical lectures in Philadelphia, and on his return began practice in Lansingburgh. In 1851 he retired from practice and became engaged in banking. He died suddenly, 9 Feb., 1872.

Dr. Leonard married, 25 May, 1835, Margaret C., daughter of John Nicholas, Esq., of Geneva, N. Y., and by her had four sons and three daughters, of whom the daughters and one son are still living. After the death of his first wife, he married Miss Anna M. Stewart, who survives him.

Josiah Barnes, son of Hon. Jonathan Barnes (Y. C. 1784) and of Rachel (Steele) Barnes, of Tolland, Conn., died in Buffalo, N. Y., June 1, 1871, aged about 67. His older brothers graduated at this college in 1810 and 1815.

Dr. Barnes received the degree of M.D. at the University of Pennsylvania in 1829, and was for many years a practising physician in Buffalo.

A son graduated at this college in 1860.

Joshua Belden, son of Dr. Joshua Belden, Jr. (Y. C. 1787), was born in Newington Parish, in Wethersfield, Conn., Aug. 3d, 1802.

He settled in St. Louis, Mo., in 1828, but being unsuccessful in business, removed in 1830 to Howard county, in the same State, where he engaged in farming. His residence continued in or near Glasgow, in that county, until his death, March 2d, 1870, in his 68th year.

Mr. Belden married, June 10th, 1834, Mrs. Agnes Graves, daughter of Judge Henry Lewis. He survived his wife many years, buried two sons and left an only daughter. At the time of his death he was an Elder in the Presbyterian Church.

Sheldon Beardsley, son of Stephen and Catharine (Beardsley) Beardsley, was born at Long Hill, in Trumbull, Conn., in the year 1803.
On leaving College he entered the Yale Medical School, from which he received the degree of M.D. in 1831.

Having practiced a year or more with Jehiel Williams, M.D., of New Milford, Conn., he removed to North Branford, Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life in the practice of his profession. He died of heart disease, Jan. 26, 1872.

He leaves one son, who graduated from this College in the Class of 1857.

Lemuel Foster, son of Phineas and Hannah (Kilborn) Foster, was born in Hartland, Conn., Nov. 24, 1799.

For the three years following graduation he studied theology in the Yale Theological Seminary. Having been commissioned by the Home Missionary Society, he left for Illinois in Sept., 1832, and there remained until his death, occupied as preacher and teacher, gathering churches and establishing academies, with great devotion and with great success. He was ordained by the Sangamon Presbytery, in Sept., 1833, having labored for the preceding year in that county. He was then stationed at the following places, in succession: at Bloomington for five years, at Bethel for seven years, at Alton for eight years, at Atlanta for six years, at Onaga for four years, and at Blue Island, where he formed a church, April 1, 1863, for six years.

He died at Washington Heights, April 1, 1872, aged 72.

He married in May, 1831, Miss Lydia Cowdery, of Hartland, who survives him. They had no children.

John Clark Hart was born in Cornwall, Conn., 10 Dec., 1804, the eldest of twelve children. He was fitted for college at Goshen Academy, and spent the first year of his course at Amherst College.

He pursued his theological studies chiefly in Philadelphia, being employed for a part of the time as City Missionary. In Jan., 1835, he was ordained and installed over the Presbyterian Church in Springfield, N. J. Here he labored for nine years. He then took a dismissal on account of illness in his family, and in the spring of 1844 became pastor of the Congregational Church in Hudson, O. This position he held for eight years, and for the next two years edited the "Ohio Observer" at Hudson. He was then for six years pastor of the Congregational Church in Ravenna, next for two years pastor of the churches of Edinburgh and Charlestown, and for the four following years pastor in Kent. For the five remaining years of his life he was supplying the pulpit of other destitute churches in the same part of Ohio. He died in Mantua, O., in Oct., 1871, in his 67th year.

Elisha Cowles Jones was born July 14, 1807, in Barkhamsted (Hartland Society), Conn., where his youth was spent upon his father's farm.

After graduating he was for nearly two years a teacher in New London, Conn. From May, 1833, till August, 1835, he studied theology in Yale Seminary, also filling, for the last year of this period, the office of tutor in the College. He was licensed to preach, May 26, 1835, and was married to Miss Julia Chappell, of New London, Conn., Sept. 17, 1835. The health of his wife required him to seek a southern climate, and he spent the next six months in Union Theol. Seminary, Virginia.

After his return to Connecticut, early in 1836, he supplied various churches, and declined a call to the Second Congregational Church in New London. In March, 1837, he received a unanimous call from the Congregational Church in Southington, Conn., which, after some hesitation, he accepted, and was accordingly ordained June 28, 1837. He died in office March 9, 1872, after an illness of eighteen days. He was a member of the Corporation of Yale College, from 1862, and one of its Prudential Committee from 1867. In all the relations of life he was greatly beloved and honored.

His first wife died July 4, 1842, and he married Miss Jane R. Barnes, of Middletown, Conn., Apr. 14, 1844, who survives him. Of the four children by his first marriage, one son and one daughter are now living—the son a graduate of this College, in the Class of 1857.

The discourse delivered at the funeral of Mr. Jones, by President Porter, has been published.

James Davenport Whelpley was born in N. Y. City, 23 Jan., 1817. His father was Rev. Philip M. Whelpley, pastor of the 1st Presbyterian Church in N. Y. City, and his mother was Abigail Fitch Davenport, a descendant of the first minister of New Haven.

After graduation he acted as assistant in Rogers' Geological Survey of Penn., for two years, and then entered the Medical Department of this College, where he graduated in 1842.
He remained in New Haven until 1846, engaged in the study of the sciences, and in literary pursuits. He then went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and began to practice his profession, but was soon obliged to relinquish it from ill-health. In 1847, he removed to N. Y. City, and became the editor and one of the owners of the "American Whig Review," to which he had been a frequent contributor from 1845. While thus engaged, in 1849, he formed a project of establishing a commercial colony in Honduras, and in furtherance of this enterprise, spent two years in San Francisco, purchasing and editing one of the daily papers there. His arrangements were disturbed by the presence of the filibuster Walker in Honduras, and on going thither he was detained by Walker for nearly a year, enduring great privation, and being impressed into service as a surgeon. Escaping to San Francisco, he returned early in 1857 to the East, and again devoted himself to literature, and to scientific studies. For the last ten years of his life he was a great sufferer from asthma, which gradually developed into consumption of the lungs, of which disease he died, at his residence in Boston, 15 April, 1872.

Dr. Whelpley's publications show a most original mind, and his unpublished papers are even more remarkable. He was a member of the American Academy. His scientific researches were chiefly in physics and in metallurgy.

He married first, in Jan., 1848, Miss Anna M. Wells, of Roxbury, Mass., who died 29 July, 1859, leaving one daughter, still living. His second wife was Miss Mary L. Breed, of Virginia, whom he married in the autumn of 1861, and who survives him, with her three children.

Perkins Kirkland Clark, son of Enoch and Abigail (Kirkland) Clark, was born in Westfield, Mass., Dec. 8, 1811.

After graduation, he spent a year or more in Savannah, Ga., as a teacher, and in 1840 entered the Theol. Seminary at Andover, Mass. In 1841 he transferred himself to the Yale Theol. Seminary, where he finished the course in 1843. In the meantime he entered, in 1842, on the office of tutor in the College, which he occupied until 1845. The next year he taught in the Normal School in Westfield, Mass., and resigned this position to engage in the work of the ministry, having been licensed to preach in August, 1842, by the Hampden Association.

He supplied the pulpit of the Congregational Church, in Chester village (now Huntington), Mass., from his ordination, August 26, 1846, until the spring of 1852. He then accepted a call to Hinsdale, Mass., where he was installed over the Congregational Church, June 16, 1852, and where he remained until compelled by ill-health to resign, October 2, 1855. Having partially recovered, he began in May, 1856, to supply the First Church in South Deerfield, Mass., (though not installed until June 29, 1859) where he remained until Sept. 26, 1865, when the church of which he had been pastor was united with the other Congregational Church in the village. He was installed over the Congregational Church in Mittineague (West Springfield), Mass., Jan. 16, 1866, and was dismissed from this charge April 18, 1871, to accept a call to the First Church in Charlemont, Mass., where he was installed, Aug. 16, 1871. A bronchial difficulty, from which he had suffered for many years, was aggravated by the labor of removal, and his health, which all his life had been very far from vigorous, gradually failed until he died, at Charlemont, Jan. 4, 1872.

Mr. Clark married, Nov. 20, 1845, Hannah S. Avery, of Springfield, Mass., and she, with three of her four children, survives him. The only son is a graduate of this College, in the Class of 1870.

Samuel Gregory was born in Guilford, Vt., Apr. 19, 1813, and died in Boston, Mass., of consumption, March 23, 1872.

For several years after graduating he was engaged in teaching, lecturing, and writing, on educational and sanitary subjects.

In 1847 he began the special work which engrossed his attention for the rest of his life,—the medical education of women and their introduction into the profession. In 1848 he was prominent in starting the New England Female Medical College, in Boston, said to be the first institution of the kind in the world. He continued to be the secretary of this institution until his death, and had the satisfaction of seeing it firmly established.

He was unmarried.

Louis De Onis Champlin, son of Matthew F. and Sally A. Champlin, was born in Elbridge, N. Y., 22 Jan., 1822. His parents removed in his childhood to Beaver Co., whence he entered college, having first spent nearly a year in Marion College, Mo.

He studied law in Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was admitted to the bar in 1844; but in the same year he removed to Cincinnati, and in the spring of 1845 began practice in that city. He continued there, in the profession of the law,—with the exception of one year (1853-4) passed in San Francisco—until his death.
He died of jaundice, 15 Oct., 1871, aged 49.

He married, in Nov., 1848, Miss Isabella Carter, of Cincinnati, who survives him.

GUY BRYAN SCHOTT, son of James Schott, of Philadelphia, Pa., was born Feb. 11, 1822.

He studied medicine for a year after graduation, and then law for two years. He was admitted to the bar in Philadelphia, but soon gave up practice. He continued to reside in or near Philadelphia, and died in that city, of consumption, Sept. 6, 1871.

He married Miss Marion Gray, of Boston, Mass., who survives him.

ALBERT BARNES BUTTLES, the son of Joel B. and Lauretta
Buttles, was born 25th Apr., 1822, in Columbus, O.

He entered Kenyon College, Ohio, in 1837, and having passed through the Junior year in that institution, entered the Junior Class in this College, in Sept., 1840. On graduation, he im-mmediately entered the Yale Law School, and studied until the Spring of 1844, when he received his degree, and was admitted to the bar in this State. He then returned to his native city, where he resided till his death. In the summer of 1845 he was admitted to the bar in Ohio, and practised law (with intervals spent in horticultural pursuits, on account of imperfect health) until Oct., 1854, when he was elected Clerk of the County Court of Common Pleas, and ex officio Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State.
After retirement from these offices, in Febr., 1858, he devoted himself chiefly to private business, filling various local offices of trust.

He died in Columbus, 27 Jan., 1872, in his 50th year. He married, 27 Nov. 1849, Miss Mary E. Ridgway, of Columbus, who survives him.

PHILOTUS DEAN, fourth son of Amos and Nancy (Kempton)
Dean, was born in South Glastenbury, Conn., 29 Oct., 1822.

After graduating, he remained at home in consequence of ill-health, until Nov., 1844, when he entered the theological seminary in Oberlin, O. He was licensed to preach, 18 June, 1846, by the Lorain County Congregational Association. From Nov., 1846, to April, 1849 (with the exception of one summer spent in preaching in Penfield, O.), he taught in Selma, O. In Dec., 1849, he was appointed principal of Avery College, Allegheny City, Pa., where he remained until September, 1855, when he was elected to the chair of Natural Science in the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Central High School. Three years later he became principal of the school, and held these two positions until his death. He was also from Nov., 1863, to Sept., 1867, director of the Allegheny Observatory, and spent his leisure time in astronomical calculations, and in editing a series of arithmetics.

He died of dysentery, Aug. 30, 1871, at his residence in Wilkinsburg, after an illness of two weeks. His physicians were confident that he could have recovered, if his constitution had not been greatly weakened by excessive devotion to his official duties.

Professor Dean was married 16 Aug., 1852, to Miss Grace P. Southmayd, of Middletown, Conn., who survives him, as do two of their three children.

JOHN BUTLER CONYNGHAM, second son of Judge John N. and Ruth A. (Butler) Conyngham, was born in Wilkes Barre, Pa., 29 Sept., 1827.

He studied law for three years in Wilkes Barre, and there began practice, but in Dec., 1851, removed to St. Louis, where he continued in his profession.

On the breaking out of the war he enlisted at the first call for three months' volunteers in the 8th Pa. Infantry, and was chosen 2d Lieut. of his company. At the close of this service he re-enlisted as Major of the 52d Pa. Infantry, was immediately promoted to be Lieut.-Col., and held the rank of Col when mustered out in July, 1865. He afterwards went to Montana, and in March, 1867, entered the regular army as Captain of the 38th Infantry. Near the beginning of 1871, while stationed at Fort Clark, Texas, he suffered from apoplexy, followed by Bright's disease. He lived to reach Wilkes Barre, where he died 26 May, 1871. He was unmarried.

EDWARD JESSUP died in Vevay, Switzerland, April 2, 1872, in the 46th year of his age. He was a native of Southwick, Mass.

Upon graduation he began his theological studies in the Berkeley Divinity School in Connecticut, being a member of the first class. He was ordained Deacon by Bishop Brownell, at Hartford
Dec 22, 1850, and immediately took a position as assistant minister of St. John’s Church, Waterbury, Conn. After remaining there for two years, being in the meantime advanced to the Priesthood by Bishop Williams, March 7, 1852, he took charge of a parish in Chicopee, Mass. In 1854 he became rector of Grace Church, Bath, Me., where he remained until the autumn of 1859, when he accepted the rectorship of the Church of the Redeemer, in Brooklyn, N Y. This position he held at the time of his death. Exhausted by the labors of his ministry, he sailed for Europe in July, 1871, and at first improved in health; but gradually his strength failed, and he sought Vevay at the beginning of the winter.

Mr. Jessup married in 1859, and leaves a wife, with two daughters and three sons.

Henry Martyn Colton was born in Royalton, Niagara county, N Y, Nov. 5, 1826. He was the fifth of six brothers who graduated at this College, the sons of Rev. George Colton (Y. C. 1804) and Lucy (Cowles) Colton.

He remained at the College for one year after graduation, as Berkeley Scholar, pursuing a select course in philosophy and language. The next three years were spent in the Yale Theological Seminary, and in Nov. 1852, he was ordained pastor of the First Congregational Church in Woodstock, Conn. This charge he resigned in Jan., 1855, and he removed to East Avon, Conn, where he supplied the pulpit of the Congregational Church until April, 1857. In May, 1857, he established a classical school in Middletown, which he continued for eleven years. In Sept., 1858, he opened the “Yale School for Boys,” in N. Y. City, which he was still conducting at the time of his death.

Mr. Colton died, after a short illness, in Middletown, June 2, 1872, aged 45½ years.

He married Lucy, daughter of Ezra Tuttle, of New Haven, Conn., Oct. 25, 1852. His wife survives him, with children.

Edward Clement Hough, second son of Rev. Joseph and Lavinia P. (Wightman) Hough, was born in Bloomfield, Conn., Sept 10, 1827. While he was in College, his family residence was in Hawkinsville, Ga.

During the year 1850, he taught in a private family in South Carolina, and in 1851 he began the study of law in Waynesboro'.
Ga He was admitted to the bar May 8, 1852, but did not engage in the profession He remained in Georgia, first as assistant treasurer of the Central Road and Banking Company for one year, then for four years in the Railroad Bank of Savannah, and from 1857 as teller in the Bank of Savannah. He died in Savannah, of heart disease, June 11, 1872, in his 45th year.

Joseph Bardwell Lyman was born in Chester, Mass., Oct. 6, 1829.

He taught in Cromwell, Conn., during the winter after graduation, and subsequently in Adams County, Miss. From June, 1853, till Jan., 1865, he was studying law and teaching in Nashville, Tenn. He then went to the New Orleans Law School, and there graduated in 1856, in August of which year he was admitted to the bar. He practised law in New Orleans until the beginning of the late war, when he removed to Stamford, Conn. After a few years, during which he was a frequent contributor to the N Y. press, he went to N. Y. city as agricultural editor of the World. After two years in this position, he became managing editor of Heath and Home, and soon after agricultural editor of the Tribune, which place he filled for the last four years of his life. He died, of the small-pox, at his residence in Richmond Hill, L. I., Jan. 28, 1872.

Mr. Lyman married, in Nashville, July 14, 1858, Miss Laura E., daughter of Rev. Charles Baker, of Somerville, Mass. She survives him, with six children.

Douglass Ridgway Bannan, son of John Bannan, was born in Schuylkill County, Pa., March 6, 1832, and died in Charlestown, Mass., Nov. 16, 1871, of typhoid pneumonia.

He studied medicine in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, receiving his degree in 1856. He afterward spent two years in Paris, and then established himself in Philadelphia. On July 22, 1861, he entered the U. S. Navy, as Assistant Surgeon, and subsequently rose to the rank of Surgeon. He held this position at the time of his death. He was unmarried.

William Boies, son of Justus Boies, was born in Northampton, Mass., March 21, 1828, and died of heart disease in Troy, N. Y., June 17, 1872.
He studied law with Hon Henry Hogeboom (Y C 1827), in Hudson, N Y, and subsequently became his law-partner there, and later at Albany, until April, 1855, when he removed to N. Y. city and entered into partnership with Judge Sutherland. A few years ago he returned to his native town, and there practised his profession until March, 1871, when he removed to Troy, where he was in extensive practice at the time of his death.

Mr. Boies married in 1859 Susan R., daughter of Judge Hogeboom, who survives him with two children.

Charles Henry Whittelsey, only son of Charles B. and Jane (Mulford) Whittelsey, was born in New Haven, Conn., Oct. 2, 1832.

A hemorrhage of the lungs during the latter part of his Senior year obliged him to give up all study, and have perfect rest for several months. After the recovery of his health, he was in business in N. Y city until the beginning of the late war. He entered the volunteer service in March, 1862, as a Lieutenant in the 1st Conn. Artillery, but was soon appointed Assistant Adjutant General on the Staff of General R. D. Tyler, and in 1864 assumed the same position on the staff of Maj.-Gen. H. G. Wright. In 1865 the rank of Brevet Brigadier General was conferred on him. In July, 1866, he accepted an appointment as Captain in the U. S. Army, and served until his death in the Department of the Platte.

He died at Fort Bridger, Wyoming Territory, Oct. 18, 1871, of typhoid fever, after an illness of several weeks. In 1865, the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him, and his name was enrolled with his class.

John Milton Holmes, the son of Rev. Wm. Holmes, was born in the Isle of Sheppy, Kent, England, 23 May, 1831. He was hardly four years of age when his parents emigrated to this country.

From college he went to Oak Ridge, Ill., where he taught until April, 1859. The next two years were spent in the Andover Theological Seminary. He was called from the Seminary to the First Congregational Church in Jersey City, N. J., of which he was ordained the first pastor, 23 May, 1861. His labors in building up this church, and in the cause of the country during the war, so impaired his health that in April, 1867, he was sent to Europe by his parish. He returned in June, 1868, but with renewed labors came renewed symptoms of pulmonary disease, and he was obliged to remove to Minnesota for the winter. With great reluctance, his church consented to his dismissal, 5 May, 1869. The following summer was spent in Andover, Mass., and the winter in Duquoin, Ill. After visiting other western States in the hope of checking his disease, he returned to Jersey City to die among his people. His death occurred on Sept. 20th, 1871.

He married, 3 July, 1861, Miss Fanny L. Tyler, of Trenton, N. Y. His widow survives him, with three children.

Lemuel Riley Evans, son of Onesimus and Eliza E. (Wallace) Evans, was born in Fayetteville, Ark., 12 Jan., 1838, and entered college from San Antonio, Tex.

After graduation he studied law in San Antonio, with some interruption from ill-health, until the secession of his State. Early in 1861 he was appointed private secretary to the Governor of Texas, and served until the latter part of the year, when he entered the military service, in which he continued till the end of the war. From March, 1866, till Aug. 1869, he was deputy-collector of Internal Revenue in San Antonio. He then came north for the benefit of his health, and returned to Texas about May, 1870. In August he started for Arkansas on business, and while on the steamboat Erie on the Red River, near Shreveport, La., fell overboard, 27 Sept., and was drowned.

Milton Bulkley was born July 14, 1840, in Southport, Conn. His death took place in San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 25, 1872.

The winter after graduation he spent in N. Y. city, studying medicine, and in 1862, during a part of McClellan's Peninsula campaign, he was in the service of the Sanitary Commission on board of a hospital ship. While thus employed, he was prostrated by malarial fever, and instead of being able to resume his studies, was advised to try a sea voyage. Accordingly he embarked, in the autumn of 1862, for San Francisco in a sailing vessel. The voyage proved of great benefit, and finding the climate of California invigorating, he decided to remain, and became a member of the firm of Sherwood, Bulkley & Co., shipping and commission merchants in San Francisco. In this business he continued until his death.

His health remained good until the winter of 1866–67, when he was suddenly attacked with hemorrhage of the lungs. From this time he was more or less of an invalid, although until the last few months of his life able to attend to his business.

He married, Feb 12, 1868, Miss Kate A., daughter of W. R. Wheaton, Esq., of San Francisco, who remains his widow, with one son.

JULIUS EMMONS died of quick consumption at his father’s residence in Colchester (Westchester Society), Conn., 4 Dec., 1871, at the age of 31.

The son of Aaron E. and Mary N. (Kellogg) Emmons, he was born in Westchester, 8 Dec., 1840, and was fitted for college at East Hampton, Mass.

After graduation, he was for about six years occupied chiefly in teaching;—first in Bacon Academy, Colchester, for two terms; afterward in East Haddam, Conn.; and after Sept., 1866, in Calodonia, Minn.

In the spring of 1870 he undertook a journey, as agent for a business firm in Boston, through the States and Territories lying along the Rocky Mountains and on the Pacific Coast. A year was spent on this trip, and he was about beginning another when fatal illness overtook him.

HENRY WHITNEY SCOTT, only child of Henry W. and Susan (Fenn) Scott, was born in Southbury, Conn., May 1, 1841.

The first year after graduation he was Principal of an academy in Cohoes, N Y. Removing to Philadelphia in the autumn of 1864, he took charge of the Chestnut Hill Academy, and conducted it for five years with remarkable success. He then became associate principal with Mr. R. H. Chase of an English and Classical School for boys in Philadelphia, and so continued until his death.

In June, 1871, he sailed for Europe. While traveling in Germany, he became conscious of a failure of health, which developed so speedily that it was only by a great effort that he reached home. He left Liverpool Oct. 12, and arrived at New York on the 23d. He finally reached Southbury Nov. 3, and after lingering with varying symptoms of congestion of the lungs, he died Dec. 6, 1871, aged 30.
Mr. Scott testified his affection for his Alma Mater by creating in his will a fund of $1000 for Academical premiums for excellence in Modern Languages, and by leaving the bulk of his earnings (about $2500) as a teacher to constitute a fund for the College Library.

Thomas Haughee was born in Longford, Ireland, in 1836. He prepared for College in the Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven.

After graduation he studied medicine in the medical department of this College, receiving his degree in 1868. He subsequently spent some time in hospital practice in Hartford, Conn., and in New Haven, and then went to Laramie, Nebraska, as assistant surgeon in the Union Pacific R. R Hospital. While there he received an offer of partnership with an experienced physician in Lincoln, Nebr. This he accepted, and after several months of successful practice, he went on a visit to Ireland, where he married.

He left Liverpool for America on the steamship “Oceanic,” Dec. 20, 1871. On Jan. 6, 1872, he was on deck when a heavy wave breaking over the bulwarks swept him off his feet, fracturing his arm and otherwise injuring him: congestion of the lungs set in, and he died Jan. 8, 1872. He was buried at sea.

James Brainerd Tyler, son of Ralph and Sarah Ann (Lay) Tyler, was born at Brainerd Station, Jamaica, W. I., March 23, 1842, where his father was then a missionary.

After graduation, he spent four years in teaching in Millbury, Mass., and then entered the Yale Theol. Seminary, where he completed the course, and received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity, in May, 1871.

He was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church in Groton, Conn., Sept. 27, 1871, where he died suddenly, of rheumatic fever, May 28, 1872.

He was unmarried.

Harry Wilson, son of James Wilson, was born at Jersey Shore, Pa., Sept. 3, 1841, and died there after a short illness August 9, 1871.

He had been a practising lawyer in Forest City, Minn.

Charles Hosmer Chapin, son of Charles Chapin, was born in Champlain, N Y., 27 June, 1848, and entered College from Whitehall, N. Y.
He died in Natchez, Miss., where he was a teacher in the public schools, 5 Nov., 1871, of yellow fever.

Orlando Cope, born 10 March, 1843, died at Jasper, Ind., of bilious fever, 2 July, 1871. He entered this College at the beginning of Sophomore year, from Indiana State University. At the time of his death he was with an engineer corps, surveying a route for the Rockport and Cincinnati railroad.

George Alexander Robinson, son of Jeremiah M. Robinson, was born in Baltimore, Md., 31 Jan., 1848.

His residence at graduation was Philadelphia, and he returned thither to pursue a course of study, with the intention of entering the medical department of the U. S Navy. When near the completion of his second course of lectures in Jefferson Medical College, he died of apoplexy, 28 Nov., 1871.

Charles Howell Board died in Edenville, Orange County, N. Y., Aug. 8, 1871, less than four weeks after his graduation. He was born in Edenville, Sept. 5, 1848, and was left an orphan in early childhood. He was prepared for College at Williston Seminary, East Hampton, Mass.

He was unwell for some time before graduation, without any distinctly marked disease. Probably too close application, with insufficient exercise, produced general debility. He left for home on the day after Commencement, and seemed to rally, but only for a brief period. Typhoid fever attacked him, and in his weak state he sank rapidly and died after being confined to his bed less than a week.

In his will, which was made a few months before his death, he left the sum of $2,500 to the Library of Yale College, the annual income to be devoted to the purchase of books on political economy and social science.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Oliver Kingsley Isham, son of James and Mary Isham, was born in Tolland, Conn., March 22, 1798, and died in the same town, of consumption, March 10, 1872.
He studied medicine with Dr. Silas Fuller, of Columbia, Conn., before entering this Medical School.

He entered on his profession as partner of the late Dr. Nathan Howard, of South Coventry, Conn. He remained in this place three years, and then removed to Tolland, where he resided, fulfilling the duties of his profession till within a few months of his decease.

He married Minerva Griggs, of Tolland, and had five children.

Jeremiah Nathaniel Peabody, son of John N. and Mary (Mason) Peabody, was born in Lebanon, Conn. 26 Aug., 1809.

After practicing his profession in Montville, Conn., and elsewhere at the East, Dr. Peabody removed in 1848 to St. Clair, Mich., where he continued in extensive practice until 1867, when on the failure of his health he retired from his profession and removed to Detroit, where after five years of extreme bodily suffering, he died, 10 Febr. 1872.

1843.

William Coley Betts died in Hartford, Conn., July 23, 1871, aged 56 1/2 years.

He had been for more than twenty years a practising physician and druggist in Brooklyn, N.Y. He was also specially interested in the subject of ventilation, and had obtained several patents for inventions in that connection.

Enoch Tenney Winter, the fifth son and tenth child of Benjamin Winter, a captain in the Revolution, and of Hannah (Searle) Winter, was born in Danbury, N.H., Sept. 19, 1806.

He finished his studies in the New Hampton (N.H.) Lit and Theol Institution, and was ordained over the first Baptist Church in Bradford, N.H., in March, 1831. From 1832 to 1835 he was a pastor in Henniker, N.H.; from 1835 to 1838 in Cavendish, Vermont, and then accepted a call to a church in Fredericksburgh, Va. While here his voice gave out, and he turned his thoughts to the medical profession.

After receiving his degree, he settled in N.Y. city as the superintendent of the N.Y. Orphan Asylum, which place he occupied until 1848. From that date until within a year of his death he was a practising physician in N.Y. city. He died Apr. 27, 1871, in Harlem, N. Y., at the house of his only child, a daughter.

Hobart Keese, son of Rev. Wm. Linn Keese (Columbia Coll., 1823) and of Mary Matilda (Drake) Keese, was born in Albany, N. Y., Sept. 18, 1831.

He practised his profession in New Haven for about two years, and then made an extended foreign tour. About 1859 he opened an office in N. Y. city. His professional career was much interrupted by disease. He died of consumption in N. Y. city, Nov. 7, 1871, aged 40.

DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY AND THE ARTS.

Lewis Bridge Stone, son of the late J. Cameron Stone, of N. Y. city, died in Paris, France, Nov. 10, 1871, aged 24.

He was returning from a visit to California, Japan, China, and Europe. During the summer of 1871 he contracted the malarial fever in Rome, from the effects of which he never recovered.

Ferdinand Eugene Powell was born in Lyonville, Uwchlan Township, Chester County, Pa., June 3, 1849.

After graduating at the Sheffield Scientific School, he entered Columbia College Law School. He died, of a kidney disease, in N. Y. City, May 20, 1872.
